

Does your PowerPoint presentation look like this?

Boring, isn't it? Worldwide, seven million PowerPoint presentations are given every day, and maybe six and a half million of those look, er, 'basic'. If you're tired of 'dull' or just don't have time to fix it, here is some good news –

It doesn't have to be like this.

How to fix it:

1 - You call us.

We're local to you, so we can call in and talk it through, try some ideas and get straight to work.

2 - We do it for you.

We know what works for a really effective result; that's why you need us.

Tell us what you want and leave us to it, and it needn't cost a fortune.

You can email us the words and we'll email you the finished PowerPoint file:

Or we can come along on the day, sort out all the technical things and leave you to do what you're there for – giving the presentation.

Who are Presentation Programmers? A partnership of freelance professionals with a wide range of skills and vast experience of all sorts of media and event work, hence our slogan; 'Presentation Expertise'. We've worked on live TV and radio, on some very high-profile events, and to live audiences ranging in size from 300,000 (Trafalgar 200) to just one (The Queen).

How much? £50 per hour of actual programming time (plus VAT). More complicated, naturally, takes longer, but we don't have a standard charge and we won't rip you off.

What else? We can rent you a laptop with your presentation pre-loaded. If you're taking part in a large conference we can sort out the technical bits. Or perhaps you're organising the whole thing – we have the expertise, the equipment and the contacts you'll need. Maybe you want a video made: we can do that too.
